Subject: Help with organizing the Web page

Hi everyone!

Some of my main questions are:

1. How much should we overlap with this page, which, of course, has daily updates:

http://www.epaossc.org/site/site_profile.aspx?site_id=11082

The OSC page has much more information than our little page has, including documents such as this:

<http://www.epaossc.org/sites/11082/files/Data%20Update%2008082015.pdf>

I worry about overlap, although HQ wants our page to be the main place where people go for information...

2. Should we post a Q&A page? Jessica Orquina likes that idea as a place to send the people who are absolutely flooding our Facebook page with negative comments.

3. I don't see anywhere on the page that shows the updated spill estimates of over 3 million gallons (instead of the initially reported 1M gallons, which IS on our page). This is why I'd like to totally reorganize the page.

Here's another example (and reason that I want to go through a Word doc version of the Web page with someone):

We had an update that Paula wanted me to post, but much of it was in bold. I wasn't sure what to do (and everything was very much in flux at this point). We could still easily include it as a separate "August 7th update":

Sampling Process (Aug 7, 2015)

Deliberative Process/Ex. 5

Thanks!
